

There are many reasons to consider adding a bunny to your home. Rabbits are quiet, don't need to go outside for walks and can live with dogs and cats (with proper introduction, of course). There are many ways to house them inside or they can have free roam of a room or the entire house. Rabbits can be trained to use a litter box and sleep throughout the day when you are at work or school. Temperament-wise, their personalities are as varied as dogs and cats. Some bunnies just want to chill out near you while others will seek you out for attention. They enjoy being petted and like having a variety of chew toys around.

Rabbits also can be good pets for children. They are delicate, but if parents are involved in their care, children can be taught the proper way to pet, hold and pick up a rabbit.
